Why Boise Might Secretly Be the Coolest City in the Pacific Northwest

Thanks to creative locals and an influx of new arrivals, Idaho's capital has quietly transformed into one of the Pacific Northwest's most compelling destinations.

Livability Criteria

- Low crime (safe streets)
- High attention to/support of education
- Green space (accessible, plentiful, distributed)
- Public art (visual and performance)
- Walkable neighborhoods and office space (footpaths, mixed use, traffic controls)
- Smart city (advanced technology, broadband)

Project for Beauty Gets Under Way

BROWN DIRT that will serve next spring as the foundation for Boise's first section of the Green Belt is leveled under the supervision of Boise City park men. Clay Wilson, crew foreman, operates the tractor. Looking on are Park Supervisor Gordon Bowen, left, and Skip Gates, the Julia Davis foreman. The work on this section of the Green Belt extends about a quarter-mile east of the Capitol Boulevard Bridge.

Downtown in distress

Results of new poll suggests deep pessimism about downtown Portland, the city's economic, cultural and transportation hub. They also could pose severe obstacles to the city's recovery from the pandemic recession.

SAN FRANCISCO

Downtown S.F. has 18.4 million square feet of empty office space. We mapped every vacancy

Some of San Francisco's emptiest buildings can be tied to cutbacks by tech giants Salesforce and Meta, which have sought to cut costs with mass layoffs and office consolidations.
